Chapter 5

Handling Citations

BibTeX can be used to handle all your bibliographic needs. Simply add references to the file `ref.bib` and BibTeX will take care of the rest. An example of a BibTeX book, conference paper and journal article are given in the sample `ref.bib` file. Many online journals have links to BibTeX citations that you can download and incorporate into the `ref.bib` file.

The order of the fields is unimportant. BibTeX will display them in the correct order when constructing your bibliography. Also note that you can specify information about a reference that may not even be included in the actual bibliography. For example, the ISBN field is not required by the bibliography, but you can, if you want, put the ISBN to the BibTeX entry.

We can cite a journal article [3] and a conference paper [2] in the same way as a book citation. More information can be found in [1].
